GAYNOR WRITES EMPHATIC"NO" TO DEVERY PENSION

Chief's" Equity Has Gone Stale.

DOES IT IN 25 WORDS.

Action Follows a Long Conference in Which Devery

Pleaded for Pension.

The best Chief of Police New York City ever had" is not to have a pen-Mayor Caynor to-day wrote an and characteristic' "no" across the bill which had been passed at Albany, granting William S. Devery a pension of $3,000 a year, and dating jumped up with the ejaculation: the pension back from 1901 when he "Good beavens! He has done on behalf of the "Big Chief" in which he promised that Devery would spend the money on charity, made no impression on the Mayor. The Mayor disapproved the bill in the following laconic message:

"The beneficiary of this bill lost his office as Chief of Police by legislation in 1901. His claim that he should be pensioned may have had some equity at the time, but he has hatched that equity for more than ten years, and it has gone stale."

WILLIAM J. GATHOR. GAYNOR'S VETO FOLLOWS LONG CONFERENCE WITH DEVERY.

The Mayor's action followed a long conference with Devery yesterday afternoon, at which the former "Best Chief" urged the approval of the bill and talked himself hourse in an effort to convince the Mayor that he had a righteous claim. But the Mayor could not be warmed up to Devery's view of the situation, and the atmosphere in the Executive Chamber over at the City Hall went down so fast that the loteles began to form on the scales of Justice

The conference was at the Mayor's request. When the pension bill was noted for a public hearing last week the Mayor inquired:

heard for or against this measure?"
"Well," said Mayor Gaynor when there war no answer, "I guess I'll have to send for Devery and find out how he got poor so soon."

But Devery hadn't become poor. Only a few days before he had told an Evening World reporter, who had made a pligrimage to Far Rockaway for the purpose of discussing the proposed pension with him, that his only pov-erty was "land poverty," but otherwise he was doing well. SAID HE WOULD STAND BY THE

Then he lurched forward and fell groaning to the floor between two desks. August Bauer, secretary of the company, had been sitting at his deak in the corner. As Hyams spoke Bauer "Good beavens! He has done it at

"Big Tim" Sullivan's eloquent speech AMBULANCE CALLED AS HE BE-COMES UNCONSCIOUS.

One of the stenographers rushed out into the street and notified Policeman Garrity of the Old Sitp station, who summoned an ambulance from the Volunteer Hoapital.

By this time, Hyams, who was forty-six years old, and lived with his wife and one son at the Hotel San Remo, Seventy-fourth street and Central Park West, had become unconscious.

Before the ambulance arrived Policeman Garrity and Secretary Bauer searched Hyams. In his coat pocket was found a business card of the company on which was written:

"Dear August-Tell my wife as quietly as possible. Wire Ch. Schaffner. Thank you. Good-by."

When the ambulance arrived the unconscious man was rushed to the hospital, but he died just as that institution was reached.

Secretary Bauer said he had been expecting Hyams would kill himself, as he had made several threats to do so recently. Hyams, he said, had been living beyond his means and trying to maintain his roctal position. His lavish expenditures, he said, were not justified by the profits of the company.

WIFE DENIES THAT THEY LIVED BEYOND MEANS.

Mrs. Hyams, who was notified by telephone, hastened to the hospital. She is a tall, statuesque beauty. She indignantly denied that they had been living beyond their means.

"I don't know why my husband killed himself, but it was not for that reason," she walled.
